Now that Japan, and all thereto pertaining, which the glimpses of this unknown land are given. From a very cleverly written article in the New York Century, entitled "Mr. Harris at Jeddo," we extract the following, premising that it is based on two letters from Mr. Harris which appeared in the Washington Union :

Two letters, dated last July, written by Mr. Harris, in the freedom of private correspondence, have appeared in the Union. They are full of interesting detail of the visit to Yeddo, on occasion of the presentation of the letter of the President to the Emperor of Japan. Mr. Harris, after the usual amount of Oriental negotiation, is allowed to proceed by land from the Consulate General at Simoda to the Capital. Everything official in Japan is performed en grande tenue. A goodly company of native guards, their new silk plentifully embroidered with the American Eagle, a Japanese idea of course; "norrimon bearers, cooks, grooms, shoe bearers, fan bearers, and last, though not least, a standard bearer, and a large number of coolies, assemble on a lovely morning in November, and the procession moves on." That "norrimon," bythe-way, is nothing more than our old acquaintstrument of torture to Americans from its small totter in their round of wearisome thanks to the public.

The road is mountainous and sublime. The first sight of Fusi Yama, the "Matchless Mountain," is party nor difference of opinion. Public orators grand beyond description. The Commissioner rests appeal to these principles. They are the indispenin temples amply furnished, and once alights "at sable stock in trade of all the speakers, political a perfect bijou of a rest-house." Mr. Harris is as writers and partisan agitators of the nation. clever in telling of his journey as he was in secur- When the Constitution was formed, every word of ing it. His description of the house is excellent : it was made to correspond with this popular body "Everything was in miniature. The house was of unwritten law and philosophy, supposed to have new, and nothing could exceed its neatness. A its origin, if not in the divine law, yet in the comminiature garden adorned the rear; the trees were mon sense and reason of all men. "We hold dwarfed to the smallest of possible sizes. Here these truths to be self-evident," says the Declarawere tiny temples and grottoes, and bridges so petile tion, alluding to the unwritten law and body of that nothing heavier than a fairy could walk over principles from which the Constitution of the them. Such things Mr. Harris. He would dispense with it, but how have happened, are happening, and will continue can he, with due respect to his mission ! He gains to occur as long as men continue civilized and toladditional respect from the people, be it observed, by scrupulously observing the Sunday. No busiby scrupulously observing the Sunday. Princes pour lower order of things and ideas. It is sometimes in with bon bons and ceremony. The presentation of the letter was conveniently arranged by an exchange before hand with the reply, so that the affair would not be marred by an interpreter. A procession is arranged to proceed to the imperial palace, the American standard borne in it, being the first toreign flag ever carried through the streets of Yeddo. The reception is imposing, with officials on their knees and prostrate, and plentiful "knocking head." The Commissioner simply bows, and as he delivers his speech and box with " a striped red and white" silk cover, and listens to the sweet accents of Majesty in reply, observes the Emperor's tion." Passing from the presence of the "Tycoon," he is presented with fifteen silken robes and ushered to a feast for a hundred, but the jolly fellows were not on hand, and the "whole affair" was finally sent to Mr. Harris's quarters, and found its way into the mouths of his followers.

It is to be regretted of a civilized community unless under the idea of that official dignity prevented Mr. Harris visiting his conforming to the unwritten code. any of the three theatres in operation. It is not two butterflies of common thin paper. He first lished. raised one of them up in the air by the wind of his fan, made it flutter about his head, alight on his finger, his arm, and his face; he next set the pair in motion, and it was really wonderful to see how through the air in circles sometimes horizontal and sometimes vertical; they hovered over the water lifted up by the spindle, made a noise exactly like your locust when held in the hand. A top was declared to be a female, and having let it spin awhile, he took it up, shook it, and down fell seven distinct tops, all of which whirled merrily round. Another sudenly changed into a lantern, and, after spontaneously lighted. A piece of sewing thread about five yards long was held extended by two persons; the exhibitor put a top on this thread and ran it from one end to the other, always upright, and constantly revolving. The same feat was performed on the edge of a sword; the top ran from the hilt to the point, and back again to the hilt."

one day with the Prince of Tamba about dogs, I stated that I had always observed that where a dog had any white about his body the terminal hairs in his tail would also be white. The Prince opened his eyes at this, and, when he went home, ordered an examination of the dogs in his premises, which were found to be marked as I stated. Interested excites the interest of every body, it is pleasant to in this, he ordered his servants to scour the neighhave that interest heightened by the manner in boring streets and temple grounds, and bring up all their pariah inhabitants. These also stood the test. Amazed at this, he repeated my statement and his experience at the Castle, where some four hundred to five hundred of the high nobles assemble daily. Universal interest was excited, and there ensued such a dog hunt as Yeddo never saw before. Dogs of every kind were scrutinized, from the high priced pug, called in the vernacular jin down to the mangy vagabond that skulked about and shirked his living. Still my tale about dogs' tails stood the test. At last letters were written to Kiotoosaca and other large towns, ordering a general canine examination. When the reports arrived, my glory and reputation reached the culminating point, and I was looked upon by the Japanese as you Westerns look on Buffon, Cuvier

In new communities on the borders of civilization, vice, immorality and political corruption are in some measure popular. There is a devil-may-care style of life and legislation, a general freedom from restraint which is highly agreeable to young and ardent temperaments, and to old and hardened sinners, who renew their youth in a society which sanctions all excesses that have an air of boldness and liberality.

These border communities and new States are in a continual state of war in regard to the unwritten code. Every man goes armed to punish its violablack lackered cap, that utterly defies description in his own person, and to violate it when he differs with another person in regard to it. There is no alternative; no compromise possible in regard to this code.
